About This Content

Step into the magical world of the microscopic in this episode of The FOO Show. Will is joined by Shawn Douglas (a professor at UCSF whose research involves building nanomachines using DNA) and Jason Brown, who has been working with Shawn to recreate a version of Shawn's lab in a virtual reality environment. Join us as we explore the lab, then shrink down on a fantastic voyage. We shrink down from human scale to explore some of the equipment in Shawn's lab, then we get even smaller as we explore the microscopic world. Enjoy!

The screenshot displays a digital tool interface for a Dungeons & Dragons 5th Edition campaign. On the left, a map titled "The Smashed Keep" is visible, with a sidebar containing a table of contents:

- 0.00 Index
- 1.02 The Smashed Keep
 - Map - The Smashed Keep
 - Short Description
 - Long Description
 - Holgrax and Helegrax
 - The Hoard

The main window shows the "1.02.4 The Hoard" section, which includes a detailed description of the lion statue and its magical properties. Below the text, there are two sections: "NPC - Lion" and "Parcel - Broken Chests".

The "NPC - Lion" section contains the following text:

Atop a heap of smashed chests and coins stands a lifesized lion made of brass. Maneuvering the lion down from the top of the pile is no mean feat, as it weighs 500 pounds. The beast is masterfully carved, every detail breathing life into the figure. Its mane is swept back as if the lion were in mid-stride, its eyes glint menacingly, and the countless individual strands of hair in its coat can be made out. A small iron spike is embedded in the lion's left front paw. Should this spike be removed, the lion animates into a live beast.

This lion is a magical statue. It serves whoever removes the spike from its paw, protecting its master to the death if needed. It is immune to mind affecting magic, and is totally fearless as it is a statue, not a lion. The lion-statue can follow simple commands given by its master. Should the lion be slain, it reforms into a statue and shatters into a million brass fragments, losing its magical properties forever. The lion can return to statue form by inserting the iron spike back into its paw, after which it will not reanimate for a day but will be restored to full vitality and health when it is.

NPC - Lion

Spilling from smashed remnants of at least six large chests, which look as though they were chopped apart with axes, are mounds of mixed coins (6500gp, 24,540sp, 18,000cp). Buried among them are a dozen silver candlesticks shaped like slender castle towers (20gp each), two marble goblets with translucent quartz stems (35gp each), three silver combs (40gp each), a wooden statue of a graceful fawn, with one of its legs broken off (7gp), a large bronze bowl, the rim of which is studded with lapis lazuli (300gp), a gold-decorated hunting horn carved from a single large piece of bone (200gp), a bejeweled longsword, and a marble sphere the size of a small barrel of ale.

Parcel - Broken Chests
